was the unanimous verdict of the State Fair visitors and the newspaper writers that the exhibition made by the Girls' Canning Clubs of Virginia and the public demonstrations conducted by of the most popular and most attrac-tive features of the fair of 1914. If the comment to be heard on the grounds and voiced elsewhere is an indication of the impression produced by what the visitors saw and of the background of work at their homes, there should be to difficulty next year in securing local co-operation in every county in Vir

Every canning club girl will un toubtedly say without hesitation that he crop year now ending is one that hey will never forget. Everybody cnows that the entire State has been e victim of the severest drought in e memory of a generation. The lack rain made the task just as difficult the girls striving to make a start in the world as it was for the farmers many of whom suffered woefully be cause the floods would not descend.

IN SPITE OF UNFAVORABLE CONDITIONS, THEY WERE THERE It is this fact that makes the show ng at the State Fair truly wonderful When one thinks of the disadvantages, one marvels at the results. If such things can be done under such cir-cumstances, it is easily to be seen that in an ordinary season the clubs will demonstrate to all the people that the money put into their organization and their maintenance is about the best investment that could be made of the people's funds, county and State. No wonder that President Eggleston, of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, who now the actual head of farm demon stration work in this State, by virtue of an act of Congress, looks with such favor on the work among girls that plans an extension of endeavor in near future.

It seems indeed a far cry from the les of tempting fruit and vegetables the fair, and the demonstration of anning done just outside the exhibit building, all bearing evidence of the fact that the lesson that "work well done is the outward and visible sign active spiritual realties." was well learned, to the time when for the girls the small farms and on no farms all there was no ray of light on pathway looking toward economic independence or toward a part in the world's activities. That such results have been crowded into a few short years is almost inconceivable.

Some of the visitors were privileged to hear the stories of the county work-ers who have gone in and out among the people, and who have witnessed the awakening to a new life in count-less instances—the modern miracle of the birth of human souls. AN INTERESTING CASE

BY WAY OF ILLUSTRATION Through the long weeks of the past summer, when it seemed the rain would never come, a girl might have been seen tolling up the side of a moun-tain in the Blue Ridge, carrying buckets water. A child in a large family, nich had but the barest necessities existence, she was found by a county forker, and heard of the possibili-ics that lay before her. She deter-nined to fit herself to be a teacher, ut before her rose the mighty ob-tacles of a high school course and stacles of a high school course and normal training. One Good Thing Comes to Old Dominion Because of War in Europe.

Because of the increasing demand or manganese caused by the great war in Europe, the Pittsburgh (Pa.) Manganese Company is preparing to add to its facilities near Elkton, Va. The company purchased 140 acres of manganese land and leased 150 acres. For several months past its weekly capacity has been 100 tons of ore, and another shaft is being sunk. Much of the output has been shipped to the Pittsburgh furnaces of the Carnegie Pittsburgh furnaces of the Carnegie Steel Company, and since the European war began shipments have been made to various open-hearth plants. Brick and paint manufacturers have also been using some of the Pittsburgh company's manganese. From the mines the ore is switched to the Norfolk and Western Rallway, and is washed for shipment to buyers. Had the deadbeat paid him for the suit, and then waylaid and robbed him of the money he would be classed as a high-wayman and forcibly impressed in the State's service; but as it is, he goes bitthely on his way. Tradesmen have now declared war on him. If he beats one, his pame and the grievance against him are sent to a place where they may be seen by others; and in well organized communities it begins to look as if the deadbeat will have to go without or go to work. All men desire to become millionaires, many reach that great achievement in their dreams and a chosen few attain the goal in reality, but it is rare that a person wakes up one morning to find himself an actual "multi" and rises the following morning to find his riches fled.

The company has since paid many millions of dollars in dividends. Certain legal requirements made it necessary to put the stock in some one person's name for the purpose of retransfer, and thus the employe from a brief sunrise to sunrise was able to say, "I am one of the richest men in the world."

Cemporary Organization in Richmond to Be Made Permanent at Bigger Gathering in the Hill City. Great Opportunity Presented.

About two weeks ago a meeting of Virginia real estate agents was held in this city, the object being to organize a kind of State association of agencies The meeting was right largely attended by agents from various towns and rural localities throughout Virginia, but the gentlemen who came in from the rural districts had some little complaint to make that the city real estate agents make that the city real estate agents did not backstand them. As far as the records show, there were no representartives from any of the big towns, such as Alexandria. Lynchburg, Staunton, Roanoke, Danville, Petersburg, Norfolk, Farmville, Newport News and so on Howeverer, the good men from the smaller towns were not entirely discouraged, and they arranged for anoth er meeting to be held in Lynchburg, October 28. The Richmond meeting was of course, only a kind of introductory proposition. It was altogether a temporary affair and all of the officers elected then and acting since, were called "temporary". The meeting resolved itself into a kind of State committee instructed to oring about a permanent State organization if possible. To that end the temporary committee has called a meeting of all real estate agents of Virginia to be held in convention in the city of Lynchburg, October 26, and so many other days as may be necessary to do some business. dld not backstand them.
